Additional Features

Dimensions

Microsoft® Business Solutions-Navision® Dimensions makes it easier to filter and sort ledger data. With this feature, you can attribute an unlimited number of characteristics, such as regions, periods, or departments, to use in transactions in all ledgers. The application area allows you to set up rules for how to combine dimensions and dimension values. You can also control the use of dimensions to make the dimensions-based output more valuable. Dimension rules for prioritizing default values and analysis views can also be set up to fit specific business needs.

Multiple Currencies, Multiple Languages

Companies engaged in cross-border business operations need to manage multiple currencies in all their operations. With Microsoft Navision, you can easily set up and maintain multiple currencies throughout the solution for a variety of application areas, including payables and receivables, general ledger reports, bank accounts, and resource/inventory items. System Management

The Microsoft® Business Solutions-Navision® System Management application allows you to set up and define activities within the Microsoft Navision database. Customized menus and windows can be assigned for specific users so that each user only has access to the functionality they need for their particular job. In addition, access rights for subsidiaries and users can be defined and controlled by an administrator, and Internet access can also be permitted.

C/SIDE

Essential to Microsoft Navision is its graphical integrated development environment, C/SIDE (Client/Server Integrated Development Environment). Designed for the client/server architecture, C/SIDE (pronounced seaside) is built around a high-performance, customizable relational database management system (RDBMS). Microsoft Navision runs on Microsoft SQL Server or Microsoft Navision Database Server. Both database options run on Microsoft Windows Server 2003.

Integrated with the RDBMS is C/AL, an event-driven, fourth generation development language. Besides extensive accounting and business management functionality, C/SIDE provides powerful customization tools that enable the development of customer-specific solutions as well as complete vertical solutions provided by value-added resellers (VARs) and independent software vendors (ISVs).

From financial management and CRM to advanced supply chain management and e-business, Microsoft Navision brings together an unrivalled array of functionality and features so you can capture, organize, share, and leverage your critical business information across your company, as well as with key partners and customers.
